

Why an unheralded player is one of the best players in Basketball

This is Kyle Lowry.

He plays basketball for the Toronto Raptors in the National Basketball Association (NBA).

Scroll down to continue

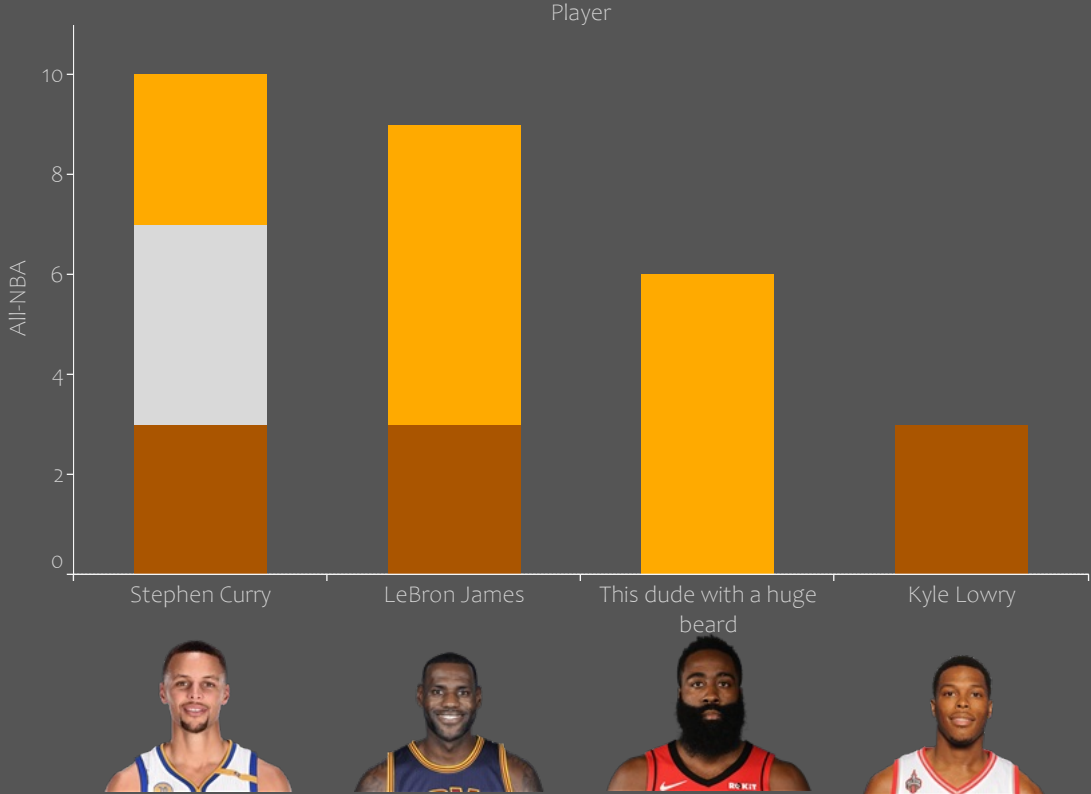

At first glance, he doesn't seem like a good basketball player.

He's short

He doesn't win many awards

Player All-NBA Team Selections, 2014-2020

He doesn't score many points.

Top Players in Points per Game, 2014-2020

However...

...what if I were to tell you...

...that Kyle Lowry is one of the best players in basketball today?

How is this possible?